

Cheyenne

My Tribe Report

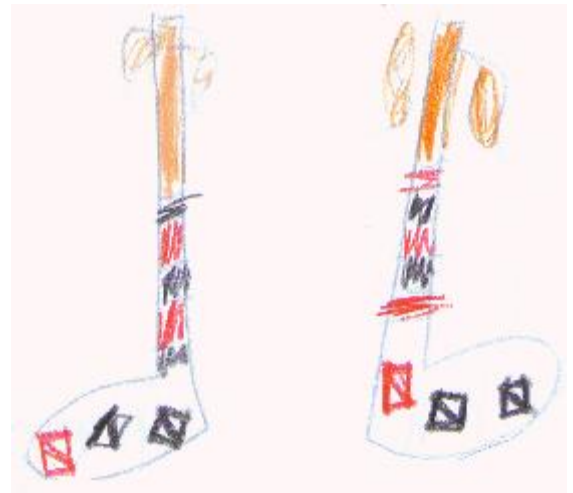

CHEYENNE

I picked the Cheyenne tribe because I have never heard of it, and it is my name.

The Cheyenne tribe called themselves Tsi-Tsis-Tas, the people. They lived east of the Rocky Mountains in the area called the Great Plains.

The Cheyenne ate parts of the buffalo. The parts that couldn't be eaten were used for clothes, sleds, and shelter. They used the ribs for sleds. The horses were used to help the Cheyenne travel.

Before the sun rose, the Cheyenne began preparing for the day. The women made morning meals. The children played by swimming, running, and making things out of clay. Today, what are left of the Cheyenne tribes are settled in Montana and Oklahoma.

