

The Pueblo Tribe

a report by

Ricardo

Food: The very first southwest Native Americans hunted mammoths until they became extinct. Then people began to hunt buffalo, also known as bison, as well as collect wild plants for food. They also learned to grow maize, or corn, their most common grain, which became domesticated in Mexico.