Why I Matter...

I matter because I live in this world.

I am the tale of a strong little girl.

No harm has been done, there is no need to worry,

But I am asking the world to change in a hurry.

We can not live in a world with racism and hate.

We have to find our strength in the love that we create.

When I matter, you matter and we can see each other clearly.

When you hurt, I hurt, and the world can feel it dearly.

I matter because you matter. We are all part of this world.

And that is the tale of this strong little girl.

I wrote this poem because I want people to know that together we can make the world a better place. I wish we would have more love than hate.
