Help Your Child Develop a Growth Mindset Let Your Children Struggle

One of the hardest parts of virtual learning is watching your child struggle. When learning gets difficult that is when children learn the most. So let your child struggle. Let them make mistakes. When your child looks at you for help, resist that urge to rescue them. Encourage them to try to do their best. When learning, mistakes are okay. Mistakes spark the brain and the brain grows, even if one is not aware of the mistake. It is the challenge in learning that makes the mind grow. Our teachers are well aware when students struggle. Our teachers are focused on asking purposeful questions that keep students engaged and working. Take some time to learn about developing a growth mindset by visiting the youcubed website.
