

My Octopus Report

by

The animal I selected is a sea creature. It lives at the bottom of the ocean. It eats shrimp, crabs, scallops, clams, abalone, moon snails, little octopuses, and fishes. And some people eat it. If you go into a cave or hole you might see some bones, spines, and shells from its last meal. The female octopus will blow water currents so the baby octopus could break free and the baby octopus takes care of its self. What I like about octopuses is that they can squirt out ink; it squirts out orange stuff so it could get away from fierce predators. Octopuses can change many colors. Octopuses have suction cups. Octopuses feed on little octopuses. Octopus can bite with their beak and if it bites you there's a 90% chance of you dying. Octopus's brain is shaped as a donut and it needs to see what its doing at all times.
