

Inuit

by

ADELLE

The Inuit lived in Alaska, Canada, and Greenland. Their homes were called igloos. The igloos were made of snow and ice. They ate fish and krill. Their clothes were made out of fur. They use huskies for transportation. They don't like being called Eskimos because it means "raw meat eaters." There is also another tribe called the Yupik. The total population is 150,000.