

The Kiowa Tribe

a report by

Blake

December, 2000

History: The Kiowa tribe was the first to discover the Black Hills, and so they called themselves the Kiowa tribe. During the 17th century, these people came to the Black Hills from their original homelands in western Montana and southern Saskatchewan, Canada. After settling in the Black Hills, the Kiowa, like the other plains tribes, became bold and expert horsemen.

Buffalo and Wolves: The Kiowa tribe ate buffalo. When they got the buffalo, it got stabbed by all of the Indians in the tribe. After the Indians ate the buffalo's heart, they made clothes out of wolf and buffalo. The Indians killed wolves to make jackets and pants, but they didn't make shoes.

